RESPONSIVE LITERACY EDUCATION

Overview

The Responsive Literacy Education program provides educators with advanced knowledge and training to work with diverse student populations as they develop reading, writing, and oral language skills. Course work includes language and literacy acquisition, culturally relevant teaching practices aligned to the sciences of reading and writing, literature, literacy assessment to inform instruction, hands-on practice, and other areas.

The MA degree options in Literacy Education will enhance your literacy instruction skills and credentials while providing advanced knowledge and training to work with diverse student populations as they develop reading, writing, and oral language skills. The program requires access to students in order to complete the methods courses. We stress the importance of recognizing a variety of literacies - home, school, community, and mainstream - in both first and second languages, and the meaningful use of literacy and language to improve students' quality of life.

By placing emphasis on the reading, writing, and visual language development of culturally, linguistically and academically diverse student populations, this master's program is at the forefront of the field. Importance is placed on using theory, inquiry and personal reflection to inform classroom practice. The program prepares teachers to become decision makers capable of developing scientifically-based and learner-centered curricula where each student's reading and writing abilities are assessed to address developmental or special needs.
